

Boob-Job bra or a bra designed for enhanced breasts

A 'boob-job' bra designed for women who have gone under the knife to boost their assets has been launched in Britain. The special bra is made for breasts that are higher, rounder and stick out more than natural breasts as a result of surgery. Le Mystere's No.9 range was designed by a plastic surgeon in the US, Dr David Brothers, who was inspired after patients complained they could not find bras to fit their bustier shape after having a boob job. He said the recent trend for pointier boobs, with a narrow base and more projection, had made it difficult for patients to find suitable bras. Dr Brothers added: 'Even normal straps and material aren't ideal.' Patrick Mallucci is a consultant plastic surgeon and co-Founder of the Britain's only nationwide, specialist breast augmentation service, mybreast.org. He said: 'Lingerie specifically catering for the unique shape of the augmented breast is great news for women who have had, or are thinking of having, breast augmentation. 'We will certainly be telling our patients about it.' The bras, which come in sizes 32C to 36E and are priced from £60, go on sale at Harrods in London on Monday, before being rolled out to other shops. About 10,000 British women go under the knife each year in their quest for bigger breasts.
